HAMILIN CHAPEL - 1835

Hamlin Chapel Methodist Episcopal Church was organized sometime before 1835 but the exact date is not known. They had services around at the different homes until the log church was built in 1835. It was named after hamilton Daffield, the father of John Daffield, who gave the land and timber for the Hamlin Chapel. The deed recorded in Deed Book 2 shows one acre and ten poles on Stony Creek about one-half mile from a note from John R. Daffield to John McNeel, Robert Moore, James L. Moore, John R. Daffield, and Samuel Young, Trustees of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Mr. Daffield was class leader as long as he lived.

The first talk of building a church was at a revival meeting held in a large barn belonging to Phoebe McNeill at Swago, now owned by Judge George W. McClintic.

The main builders were: William Baxter, who superintended the work. He was elected Justice of the Peace about this time and continued in this office for many years. Henry Duncan, an apprentice carpenter, who came to Huntersville and helped build the Court house and jail and then helped build the first brick Oak Grove Church at Hillboro, where he found his wife Patsy Baxter. John Barlow, John Aldridge, who was an expert hewer. William McCollum, who was a stone mason. There were nineteen families and all of them helped with the labor as there was no money to be given.

The lumber for the church was manufactured by William Cochran, Sr., and William A. Young on a water mill near Porter Sherp's place. It was built of hewed logs, cracks clinched and daubed, shaved shingle roof, gallery all the way around on both sides and front, and the seats were long benches with slat backs. There is a door at one end of the building and an elevated pulpit at the back.

Some years later the side galleries were removed in order to make the church lighter. Some of the benches were replaced by chairs. The church was then ceiled with yellow lin. These repairs were made about 1780 by George P. Moore, John W. Tyler, C. B. Vanreenan, all of these men were afterwards ministers, and Washington Moore.

The church was used by both Methodists and Presbyterians until 1829 when the Presbyterians built a church directly across the road from the "Old Log Church" as Hamlin Chapel is called by everyone.

The first families who attended within a radius of eight or ten miles were:

Robert Moore

Capt. William Moore ( a school teacher)

Andrew Moore

William Young

William Duncan

In May, 1854, Colonel Samuel Young preached here and made an appointment for forty years from that date. He did not live to fill the appointment but a memorial service was held for him May 3, 1894.

From 1875 to 1884 the following Methodist ministers held services in this church:

Rev. Clarmens

Rev. A. A. F. Neal

Rev. Harper

Rev. Wickline

Rev. Richardson 1878-1879

Rev. Hedrick and Hill 1881-1888. Rev. Hill also taught at the Pine Grove School.

Rev. Wickline 1882-1883

Rev. Chapel 1883-1884

Rev. George F. Moore preached and taught school during this time.

At this period in the history of this church there was a recess of twenty-three years. That is the Methodists did not use the church for that period of time. The reason for this was that the new church had been built at Edray and all of the members attended services there. However, the Presbyterians used the building during this period and had services once a month.

It was just before the recess that Washington Moore, who was quite a "joker", made the remark that he had apples bigger than pumpkins. They had him up before the Presiding Elder to try him for making such a remark. Mr. Moore said that he was talking about big apples and little pumpkins. Sure enough, when he got his big apples and little pumpkins the apples were larger than the pumpkins, so he was exonerated.

During the twenty-three years recess, the following ministers from other denominations preached at Hemlin Chapel:

Dr. W. T. Price - Presbyterian

Rev. S. G. Callison - Baptist Missionary

Rev. Wellington Hogsett and Howard Underwood, local preachers, held revival meetings during this period. In 1896 Rev. Hogsett held one of the greatest revivals ever held in this county. The mourners bench was always full. The story is told of one woman who always took her hair down before she aounced so she wouldn't lose her hair pins. I am told that the people could be heard for miles around singing and shouting on their way home from these revival meetings.

After this recess the church was in a very bad state of repair. So there were a number of improvements made before it was "picked up again", that is the way they expressed it. The improvements were made by: George Baxter, P. L. Carter, George Moore, J. F. Loughlin, and others contributed money and labor. Later it was re-roofed by George H. Moore. The last repairs were done by: Ann Barlow, Levi Baxter, Adam Moore, James Sharp and others.

The following ministers served the church after the re-cess:

Methodist:

G. A. Marston	1906 - 1909
Ira Ricket	1909 - 1913
H. A. Coffman	1913 - 1916
C. H. Ramsey	1916 - 1920
C. A. Powers	1920 - 1923
Nelson Hill	1923 - 1929
Thomas Taylor	1929 - 1933
W. A. Gardner	1933 - 1936
D. J. Combs	1936 - 1938
R. H. Skaggs	1938 -----

The Rev. Skaggs is very much liked by everyone in the County who knows him. He has nine children. When he came to Edroy, seven of the children were at home, all grown. All of his children play some sort of a musical instrument and sing and Mr. Skaggs sings also, so when there is no choir, he takes his choir with him. Altogether Mr. Skaggs serves nine churches.

Today there are only about fifteen members in this church. They have preaching services every fourth Sabbath afternoon and singing services the second Sabbath evening of each month.

this church. There has been no Sabbath School since 1928.

On July 28, 1940 there was an anniversary service held at Hamlin Chapel commemorating the one hundred fifth anniversary of the church. There were about four hundred persons present. As the church is very small and very few of the people could get inside, the services were held in a grove of trees just outside the church. Dr. McGusky of West Virginia Wesleyan made an address. Mr. William Gilmore of West Union and Mr. Lewis Barlow of Huntington gave the history of the church. There was a great deal of singing by two or three different choirs. Besides Rev. H. R. Okagga, there were two former pastors of the church present, Rev. J. R. Carter and Rev. L. J. Combs. Dinner was served on the ground to every person there. After all had eaten until they could eat no more, food was carried away in bushel baskets. The services lasted all day.

During the year of 1875 the following persons attended Sabbath School at Hamlin Chapel:

of the one hundred forty names given above, thirty-eight are living today.

To my knowledge this is the only old log church in good repair and in regular use in the county.

Information from:

Mr. Anderson Barlow, Mr. Davis Barlow, and Mr. William Gilmore. These men got their information from the older members of the church, none of whom are living. The list of Sabbath School pupils was made from memory by Mr. Anderson and Lewis Barlow. They attended the school.
